KNOCKLOUGHRIM WINDMILL

Situated on the outskirts of village of Knockloughrin

This is on high ground on the outskirts of Knockloughrin village. The mill was known locally as "Palmer's Folly" after its builder. The sails were destroyed by a great wind in the 1890's. Since then it has had a number of uses including the meeting place for the local Orange Order. It fell into disrepair until the early 1990's when a group, under the leadership of Reverend Fred Munce, decided to refurbish the mill.
